

Lasse Thomassen is García Pelayo Fellow at Centro de Estudios Políticos y Constitucionales and Senior Lecturer in the School of Politics & International Relations at Queen Mary, University of London. Before that he was a Junior Lecturer at the University of Limerick and a Teaching Fellow the University of Essex. He holds an MA and a PhD in Ideology and Discourse Analysis from the Department of Government at the University of Essex. His research has three foci: first, a deconstructive reading of the political philosophy of Jürgen Habermas and deliberative democracy; second, debates within radical democratic theory, for instance debates surrounding Laclau and Mouffe's work and debates between so-called theorists of abundance and theorists of lack; and, third, theories of tolerance, especially contemporary theories and cases of tolerance. The latter is the focus of his research at CEPC. He is the author of Deconstructing Habermas (Routledge, 2007) and Habermas: A Guide for the Perplexed (Continuum, 2010), the editor of The Derrida-Habermas Reader (Edinburgh University Press and the University of Chicago Press, 2006) and the co-editor of Radical Democracy: Politics Between Abundance and Lack (Manchester University Press, 2005).